Para 7(b) of the Memorial.

Volume I-A of Sewell's list of antiquities gives a list of antiquarian remains in South Kanara at pages 250-253. Eight of these, viz., 247 to 254 on page 9 of the list of ancient monuments revised up to April 1917 have been selected for conservation. The temples at Barkur are not included. The question may be referred to the Archaeological Department.

REPORT ON JAINA MONUMENTS

AT BĀRKŪR, SOUTH KANARA DISTRICT.

There are only three small groups of Jaina monuments at Bārkūr and all of them are in ruins and of no particular archaeological interest. The best of these is known locally as the Kathale Basti (Survey No.6 of Kosal village. Poramboke), and consists of two (2) small ruined stone built Jaina mandapas, a little (1) Siva temple containing a linga and a small oblong stone built temple known as the Kathale Basti. The latter is the only object in this group or any real interest and is in fair condition. The front of the shrine which faces the east is decorated with two bas-relief figures of doorkeepers holding the attributes of Vishnu. It contains no other images, carvings or inscriptions. The floor of the shrine has been dug up by treasure seekers and the stone pedestal on which the object of worship once stood has been thrown out into the front hall. There is nothing to prove that this is a Jaina temple and the style of the doorkeepers seems to indicate that it was originally dedicated to Vishnu. It is worth repairing at Government expense and the group including in the Standard List of Ancient Monuments. The stone roof should be pointed and made watertight, the floor re-paved and the ground all round the basement outside cleared and sloped to ensure proper drainage. The other three ruined buildings should be cleared of rank vegetation and the ground all round sloped for drainage. There are three partly buried virakals (hero-stones) on the south side of the little Siva temple, these should be removed and set up in the pillared Mandapa for protection. I was informed that these four buildings and the land on which they stand are Government property, so there will be no trouble in carrying out the proposals suggested above.

I do not consider that any steps are necessary with regard to the single stone Basti near the Kalluchappara (Survey No.1/13 of Hosal, Unassessed land), or the two ruined stone Bastis standing together near the Kalamma temple (Survey No.1/15 of Hosal, Poramboke). These are not worth preserving as ancient Monuments at Government expense and are of no particular archaeological interest or value and are not required by this department.
